

Adam Travis, MD

Chief, Psychiatry
Greater Southern Alameda Area

2016
Cecil Cutting
Leadership Award

Adam Travis, MD, has guided the growth of the GSAA Psychiatry Department since 2003 with an eye toward providing the mental health services patients need and value most.

On his watch, the GSAA is continually evaluating new treatments, especially for depression, and offering those with the greatest promise for success. His department has long been a leader in providing treatment for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder, among other critical therapies.

He is currently playing a key role in opening an inpatient Medicine/Psychiatric Unit in Fremont by 2018, slated to be the first of its kind in KP Northern California.

“My goal as chief is to help our staff and physicians thrive, so they can help their patients thrive,” said Dr. Travis. Mission accomplished.

“Dr. Travis’ dedication to his patients, colleagues, and to furthering the field makes him a steadfast role model for all in TPMG.”

– Robert Greenberg, MD, Physician-in-Chief