

AMANDA REEVE, MD

“Dr. Reeve treats each person as if they were her
one and only patient.”

Cheryl had been dreading her gynecological exam until Dr. Amanda Reeve stepped into the room. She was so warm and friendly that Cheryl completely forgot why she hadn't wanted to come in the first place. That's how it is with Dr. Reeve's patients, and with good reason.

“She's just wonderful to be around,” says her colleague Dr. Gilbert Moran, Ob/Gyn. “She's always positive, upbeat, and happy. I don't know where she gets her energy, but she puts enormous effort into every one of her patients.”

Effort and time. “The biggest thing I do for patients is give them my time,” says Dr. Reeve. “Sometimes that means I'm running behind, but I want people to have the time they need with me.”

Dr. Reeve also spends considerable time with her patients on the phone, often staying late to return calls. She regularly calls patients at home to see how they're feeling after a procedure, and if she knows someone is upset or worried, they'll get a call too. She spends even more of her time traveling around the community to speak about women's health issues and organize health fairs.

“I believe we could all learn from Dr. Reeve's professionalism and humanitarianism,” says Jami Martinez, registered dietician. “Working with her and being one of her patients has been a blessing. She is an amazing physician.”
